Blaming Automobiles
John Hertz—His Sign

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1926, by Star Company.)

RICH AMERICANS send their dollars off to Europe with their daughters, little knowing how those dollars or daughters will come back.

Sometimes dollars stay and daughters come back with a divorce and experience. Sometimes daughter and dollars stay, and the next generation returns to surprise the man that made the dollars.

OLD LEVI LEITER of Chicago, whose money established the fortune of Lord Curzon in England, would be surprised to meet his granddaughter, Lady Cynthia Mosley. Behold, she comes to the United States for a visit, speaking an English of which old Leiter would understand not one word, and she is a Socialist, spending the Leiter money to get into Parliament on the labor ticket.

Can't you imagine Levi Leiter turning in his grave like an electric fan?

THE RAILROAD trainmen, hundreds of thousands of faithful workers, ask for better pay, and ought to get it.

Railroads, protected by government, enjoy prosperity, steadily increasing. They should divide prosperity with the men that do the work, through the nights in cold and rain, when those that collect dividends are asleep.

All Americans, especially business men and money -makers, should demand that good workmen get their fair share of national prosperity.

The rich man can get only his share of what the average man has to spend.

GOVERNMENT figures show that from 1920 to 1924, "automobiles killed 60,876 men, women and children."

And in 1924 the "death roll" numbered 15,528.

Calculated to give the false and damaging impression that the automobile in itself is a dangerous, deadly demon, these figures are NOT true to fact.

OF THE sixty-odd thousand killed in five years, some were the victims of stupid, reckless or drunken drivers, some of incompetents.

The greater number killed were victims of their own carelessness, commonly described as "jay-walking."

When a man on the railroad track is killed, nobody blames the locomotive or suggests suppressing railroads. The signs read, "Stop, Look and Listen," and "Keep Off the Tracks."

City streets and country highways are now in fact RAILROAD TRACKS. Public convenience, happiness and comfort demand ALL POSSIBLE ENCOURAGEMENT OF THE AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY. Not a few, but TENS OF MILLIONS now ride in automobiles every day.

IT IS THEREFORE a crime to misrepresent the situation, discourage the automobile industry, blaming the individual, careful driver for the carelessness and stupidity of "jay-walkers." The automobile industry is the greatest blessing of the human race.

JOHN HERTZ, who bosses Yellow taxicabs in Chicago, and taxis and omnibuses all over the world, is determined to make his drivers polite and gentle, even if it hurts.

On the back of each Chicago taxi you see the sign, "If I break any traffic rule, please report me."

This is almost overdoing it, and is only equaled by a sign that humorous Americans used

ONCE RICH, DIES OF HUNGER

Once the wife of a well-to-do real estate operator, Mrs. Nora N. J. O'Connor of No. 46 Walnut park, Newton, was found dead today in bed, a victim of starvation and exposure.

As police made the discovery two daughters of the widow, Eileen, eighteen, and Nora, fourteen, were beginning another day of trying to rebuild the business left by their father, Michael O'Connor, when he dropped dead a year ago at a hearing before aldermen on a building permit.

Because there was no money to heat the house and they feared illness, the girls had taken up their home temporarily in the real estate office eating and sleeping there.

At home, the widow, in bed most of the time to keep warm, waited patiently for her daughters to do enough business to buy coal and food for her.

Absence of footprints in the snow near the house for several days aroused the suspicion of Patrolman Dow.

Sergeant Nicholas Veduccio obtained a key and entered, finding the widow dead in the damp, cold house. Medical Examiner George L. West pronounced death due to starvation and exposure.

SWAP CULT 'LOVE PALS'

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 15.—Love-swapping—the exchanging of new loves for old—was unearthed today by investigators as the newest phase of the erotic life lived by Charles Garland, eccentric millionaire, and Bettina Hovey.

The probe into conditions at Garland's latest "April Farm," a copy of his "April Farm" at Carver, Mass., gave the investigators a real shock when it was revealed that an agreement exists between various cults whereby members may be transferred from one cult to another.

"Members," of course, means women, and the women of one colony are shifted to another, remote from the first, when occasion arises.

This is the explanation for the vanishing of all the women at "April Farm," according to the authorities who caused the arrest of Garland and Bettina Hovey on serious charges following the death of their baby.

It would not surprise officials much, they declare, to discover some day that the scant acres of Gar-

Walter Channing's Boston team, which got into a fight at the start and became tangled up later with Chinook's sons, driven by Miss Clara Enebuske of Cambridge, finished second.

COPS SAVE 16 NEARLY DEAD IN EAST BOSTON FROM BREATHING GAS

Sixteen women and children were today overcome by gas which seeped into their home at No. 85 Lubec street, East Boston, from a broken gas main in the street.

The police of the East Boston division were called to the place by frantic neighbors, themselves suffering from the fumes.

In the Lubec street house the police found the sixteen all unconscious in their apartments, and the rescuers were themselves compelled to fight the noxious fumes in the work of rescue.

In suite No. 1, on the first floor, the rescuers found Angelina and Jennie Croci and Mrs. Sametto Croci.

In suite No. 2, unconscious, were: Lauretta Condone, Angie Condone, Fred Condone and the six-months-old Condone baby, Marie.

In suite No. 3 were the Passeri family including, Emma, forty-three years old; Andrew, seventeen; angie, eleven; Alfred, six; Louise, four, and Marie, two.

In suite No. 4 were the children of the Di Tomasso family, Santo, [illegible], Frances, ten, and Antonio, eight.

The rescuers carried the victims into the houses of neighbors far enough removed to escape the fumes, and there they were treated by hastily summoned physicians.

FULLER HITS AT 'UNION' IN BIG BUDGET SLASH

Demands of the "union" of State employes for increased salaries was met today with an injunction from Governor Fuller to the Legislature to "keep the juggernaut of governmental expenses down."

The Governor submitted his budget calling for the expenditure of $47,088,127 for the current fiscal year and a State tax of $12,000,000. The tax is the same as was set in 1925.

In reaching the $47,088,127 figure, the Governor slashed the recommendations of the department heads by approximately $7,450,000.

The axe fell heaviest on the department of mental diseases where recommendations for $10,908,431

ENVOYS' DEBAUCHERY FLAYED BY SENATOR

Washington, Jan. 15.—In a scathing attack upon "foreign diplomats" in the national capital, Senator Cole Blease, Democrat, of South Carolina, today charged members of the diplomatic corps were "feeding liquor to women debauching American women and keeping houses of ill-repute."

Blease directed his fiercest denunciation against an unnamed diplomat who served liquor to an American girl in a Washington cabaret recently, saw the girl arrested and "carried away to the guard house" while he escaped under his diplomatic immunity."

Blease said while envoys were bringing liquor in the Capital by truckload, without being molested, American laborers were forced to slip into alleys to get liquor and were thrown into jail by "some scoundrel in the shape of a dirty spy calling himself a prohibition agent."

"Great God," shouted the Senator, "What a country."

Blease denounced the law which grants foreign doplomats immunity to arrest in this country.

"Some of you will say these victims are bad women," said Blease, "but I never knew a bad woman that some bad man didn't make bad."

"One of these days," said Blease, "one of these foreigners will steal up on the President and stab him in the back with a stiletto or he will feed the President poison. Then instead of punishing this foreigner we'll send him back to his country."

COUPON VICTIMS ASK PONZI FOR LOTS OF LAND

Calcedonio Alviti here to open up at the same old stand for the same old customers, for the benefit of the latter, one of the dupes of the international reply coupon fiasco wrote as follows to the dapper little ex convict down among the palms and palmettoes.

Charles Ponzi
Jacksonville, Fla.
Sir:

I was a customer of yours back in 1920, investing $30.

I have received from the trustees of your bankrupt company three payments of $5 each, leaving a balance due me of $15.

As you are in this land scheme to pay back to your creditors what they lost in your 1920 venture, will you please send me deeds for three $10 lots, and let the remaining $5 go.

The Boston Evening American is withholding the writer's name.

SAY PONZI DOOMED.

While Calcedonio Alviti, charged with violation of the State "blue sky" laws in selling Ponzi's unit of indebtedness without a license, was hiring counsel in Boston, the spotlight was cast on Ponzi's latest scheme.

Reports from the South have it that Ponzi is doomed—will be driven out of the State sooner or later, even if Florida has to pass a law making his land for "public purposes," the public purpose being the riddance of the Florida real estate of a Ponzi-esque reputation.

According to Jacksonville investigators, the scheme is simplicity itself. It is like that of a man who sells a five-cent article for a quarter and voluntarily throws in two extra ones and calls them profit for the customer.

GAINS 11 LOTS TO ACRE.

Ponzi is said to be paying $16 an acre for the land that he offers at $10 a lot, and there are twenty-three Ponzi-size lots in an acre. Many other land operators are buying similar land, none at a cost of more than $15 an acre.

The dapper Boston "wizard" offering 200 per cent. profit on land which he claims in circulars is "near Jacksonville," but which in reality is sixty-five miles from that city, binds himself to give, sooner or later, three lots for the $10 investment of his customer.

By handing over deeds to twelve lots, therefore, he takes care of an investment of $40, which is what an acre costs him after he has advertised, subdivided, surveyed and staked it off.

COVERED WITH SCRUB.

Having used up twelve lots out of the twenty-three in an acre, he has eleven remaining for his company without any cost to it.

The land is undeveloped, as Ponzi himself admits, but also, as he says, is "not swampy and money will be refunded if the purchaser can show his lot is under water."

The man, whose last big financial bubble burst with a loss of millions to Boston investors, has six tracts of land, comprising about 1,000 acres, and because of his extensive advertising the scheme has been studied by Jacksonville authorities with a view to stopping him if it proves fraudulent.

IN ISOLATED SECTION.

The land is covered with scrub oak and weeds and, while Ponzi promises that every lot will face a forty-foot street, there is nothing but a winding clay road leading to the property now. Experts say that the land could be used for farming after thorough clearing, draining and other improvement.

The lone link that connects the spot with civilization at present is the shrill whistle of Atlantic Coast Line expresses that pass within a couple of miles of the sandy expanse.

Alviti, Ponzi's agent, must appear in court January 21 to answer to the charge of selling securities without being duly licensed.

While Alviti's arrest was made to forestall the danger of pernicious activities in Massachusetts and to safeguard the public, the accused agent, if found guilty, could get a maximum of 2½ years imprisonment, or a fine of $5,000, or both.

A dispatch from Jacksonville, Fla., quoted Ponzi as declaring that his Charpon land syndicate dealings with Kenneth H. Backman was within the law. It was upon evidence furnished by Backman, who is connected with the Boston Better Business Committee, that the State authorities prosecuted Ponzi's agent.

CUTS BUDGET

were reduced to $8,117,354. The public works department's recommendation for $13,066,141 was pared down to $11,690,885.

Increased revenues through fees from motor vehicles and other State activities made it possible to keep the State tax to the $12,000,000 figure in spite of the fact that the approved budget is more than $2,000,000 in excess of the budget of 1925.

The Governor warned the Legislature that costs of government are mounting in a manner "inconsistent with the State program as a whole."

As an instance of the rising costs, he pointed to the State pay roll, which has increased from $13,428,471 in 1920 to $17,037,514 in 1925, representing an increase of 26 per cent.

He submitted comparative figures showing the increased cost in some departments as follows:

Department	Net cost 1926	Net cost 1925	Inc. p.c.
Military	$515,053.34	$698,107.78	34.7
Education	3,588,391.30	5,032,965.53	40.2
Pub. welfare	4,032,833.90	4,515,039.46	11.9
Agriculture	134,314.37	192,065.08	42.
Pub. safety	228,907.21	634,580.06	177.2

He eulogized the commission on administration, "watchdog" of the treasury, for its efforts in the way of economy, a commission that has been condemned by the "Union."

As a noteworthy achievement of his administration during the year, he pointed out that in spite of extraordinary expenses the State debt has been reduced by more than $1,250,000.

daughter of Leon Chubbuck of Duxbury, was the first to receive the ministrations of the young healer. She had been paralyzed for years, having sustained her injuries when she fell from her carriage as a baby. She had long been treated at the Children's Hospital without success, and the appeal to Loris was a forlorn hope on the part of her parents.

The church was breathless as the girl was anointed with oil and Loris began his fervent prayer. Suddenly the girl's arms stirred slightly, the first movement in nine years, and then her legs moved. Finally the wondering child raised her two arms aloft and then fell sobbing into her father's arms.

The four-year-old son of Mrs. Nicholas Alfonso of No. 3 Waverley street, Brighton, also a victim of paralysis, was the next to come before Loris, and the little fellow, too, raised his hitherto inert arms above his head.

Next was Agnes Peterson, sixteen years old, of No. 8 Granite street, South Braintree, a victim of the dread infantile paralysis. This girl threw away the crutches she had used all her life after Loris had finished his prayer.

In quick succession followed: Mrs. Anne Stasis, No. 903 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, a cripple for years, who threw away her cane; Mrs. Margaret Bombay of No. 176 Safford street, Wollaston, who was able to kneel for the first time in years, Mrs. George Nicholson of No. 12 Dorset street, Dorchester, stone deaf for years, who was able to hear a whisper when Loris had finished his ministrations; Louis West of No. 56 Percival street, Dorchester, also cured of deafness; Mrs. Elizabeth Brown of No. 56 Everton street, Dorchester, cured of lameness, and many others cured of minor ailments.

GIRLS TRADED IN GARLAND CULT

land's new love-realm have been peopled with an entirely new and fresh feminine contingent—"fresh," that is, to April Farm. And perhaps new male faces would appear.

Dish-washing has taken the place of erotic love-making at the Garland place temporarily, however.

Bettina Hovey, latest and so far the steadiest of Garland's love-mates, the mother of his dead baby, over which all the trouble has started, is not lying about in shimmering silks and lingere as the pampered pet of a harem-king; instead, her arms are red, chapped by constant immersion in gold, soap-sudsy water, from washing the shirts and other things of "her man."

But she seems satisfied. Garland seems happy. And the rest of the world is rolling on.

Garland, changing his tactics entirely, has refused to receive callers and talk to them. Heretofore he has talked—perhaps too much, as he said today.

Robert Allan Noyes, Philadelphia attorney, has visited April Farm seeking to talk to Miss Hovey. He did not see her.

He did, however, obtain a transcript of the testimony taken by special master Robert L. Stuart in the hearing of Garland's application for an orphan school charter.

While declining to discuss his mission, the attorney said he was retained to learn details of Miss Hovey's association with the April Farm Colony. The documentary evidence he obtained includes Miss Hovey's testimony covering her career in several radical settlements and her life with Garland.

Stuart, whose adverse report on the charter application is being contested by a corps of attorneys employed by Garland, admitted today that the full testimony of Paul Scott, Miss Hovey and others of the colonists has not been made public.

SOCIETY WIFE, SPANKED FOR 14 YEARS, IS FREED

B. U. Professor to Dedicate Home as Means to Abolish Divorce Evil

DECREE FOR PADDLED WIFE

Mrs. Margaret Pearman Bowditch Tells Court Husband Ducked Her in Ice Cream

Fourteen years and more of spankings and such at the broad hand of a "Boy husband that never grew up," according to her father, became a bit wearisome today to Mrs. Margaret Pearmain Bowditch, society wife, and she obtained a divorce from Manfred Bowditch in Suffolk Divorce Court.

Prominent in the social set are Mrs. Bowditch and the now divorced husband. Her father is Sumner B. Pearmain, Boston broker, with homes in Framingham and at No. 256 Beacon street, where she has lived since separation in 1922. It was a long, long story recited by the frail society woman on the witness stand, and the story contained all these bits about Manfred:

HAD PRIVATE BAR.

He had no value for money and had less money. He smoked 96 varieties of cigarettes. He pushed her face down into a plate of ice cream at a party and made her lap it up.

He gave theatre parties, dinner parties and all other kinds of parties, and couldn't pay for them.

He insisted that she take care of another woman's child so he could take that woman to a party. He had a private bar in his Framingham home with a special side entrance for himself.

He choked her and dragged her downstairs. He choked her and dragged her up stairs. He spanked her hard while her friends witnessed her humiliation.

DISILLUSIONED NOW.

He threatened to kill himself and filled the house with ether fumes.

It was a long story by a disillusioned woman who, at eighteen, married a youth of twenty-one.

Two children were born—Eliza Ingersoll Bowditch in 1912 and Mary Childers Bowditch in 1917.

He was engaged in manufacturing, she testified, but while the money rolled in to him on a flood tide, the surge that took it out was a tidal wave.

Lavishly he bought himself silk night clothing, she said, expensive automobiles, hundreds of neckties, while her father was lending her carfare.

Miss Bernice B. Armstrong of New York, formerly in Mrs. Bowditch's social set in Boston and Framingham, also corroborated her testimony. Miss Armstrong said she witnessed one spanking and the ice cream incident.

Judge McCoole granted a decree nisi.

6 THUGS DRIVEN OUT OF SHOP BY MONKEY

Pawtucket, Jan. 15—"Monkey business" is not so good for holdup men, six thugs found today when a pet monkey drove them from the shop of Nicholas Assis at No. 422 Pleasant street.

With $500 in her apron pocket Mrs. Assis was somewhat dismayed when the holdup men entered and the leader poked a gun in her face. She gave him an option on a punch in the face, but he ducked and himself swung on her.

Down from a shelf hurtled the brown pet monkey, landing on the neck of the thug leader, who turned with a scream of fright, bounded out the door, slammed it behind him and clipped a piece off the monkey's tail.

The other five, with Nicholas in close pursuit with a broom, followed their startled leader, and the holdup was over before it began. The monkey licked his smashed tail sorrowfully.

SUSPENDS RUM CHASE TO SAVE TWO SEAMEN

Suspending a hot pursuit of a rum schooner to aid another vessel that was in distress, the crew of the Coast Guard patrol boat 279 rescued two Gloucester fishermen who had two Gloucester fishermen who had [illegible] open sea.

After the rescue, and taking the disabled sloop in tow, Captain Olaf Olsen of the Coast Guard boat resumed the chase of the Canadian schooner Maude Thornhill, a noted rum "mother ship," firing several shots through her rigging as she was driven away.

The rescued men are Edward Keating, twenty-eight, and John C. Hammond, twenty-seven. They were landed in Boston today and taken to Gloucester by the patrol boat CG170.

Their auxiliary sloop, the Herman and Emma, broke her propeller shaft when the clutch was shoved in too fast. For two days the men took turns guiding their boat with the rudder as wind and waves played havoc with her.

The CG279 was on duty picketing the Maude Thornhill, the crew watching to see that no rum boats went alongside to get liquor for running ashore. The schooner is said to have an exceptionally fine cargo of Canadian liquors and Coast Guards from Eastport, Me., to Cape Cod have been trailing her for days.

When she tried to dash away to lose her spotters and head in to some Maine port, the patrol boat kept right in her wake until diverted by the distress signals from the drifting sloop, then later drove her from the sea.

WALSH FLAYS ALUMINUM SLEUTH

[illegible], Jan. 15 (A.P.)—An independent investigation of the Aluminum Company of America, in which Secretary Mellon is interested, was ordered by the Department of Justice because the accuracy of a report of the Federal Trade Commission had been challenged, the Senate investigating committee was told today by John L. Lott, special assistant to the Attorney-General.

Lott was employed to take charge of the inquiry. He assigned Joseph E. Dunn, a special agent, to make the field investigation and then directed William E. Benham, another special assistant, to cooperate in inspecting the books at Pittsburgh.

Both Lott and Benham today praised Dunn.

Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, prosecutor of the inquiry as to whether the department has proceeded with due diligence in investigating charges that the Aluminum Company has violated a Federal Court consent decree, remarked that he would not even employ Dunn to investigate a "bootleg" case.

INITIATES NEW RITE HERE

Newton Highlands Home to Be Scene of New Domestic Religious Observance

Prof. H. Augustine Smith, head of the Department of Fine Arts in Religion of the Boston University School of Religious Training, will dedicate his new home at No. 26 Rockridge road, Newton Highlands, to the abolishment of divorce.

The dedication exercises will be next Monday evening and members of the faculty of the Fine Arts Club of the university will be present.

The Rev. [illegible] Woolcott, pastor of the Newton Highlands Congregational church, will lead the dedicatory services. "So far as known, it will be the first home dedication ever held in this part of the country."

"The home and the family circle," Professor Smith declared, "should be dedicated just as a church or chapel or any building or place devoted to love, service, spiritual values or the good of mankind.

"I believe to dedicate every home would produce a forceful drive against the divorce evil."

One of the features of the dedicatory services, Professor Smith declared, will be the unveiling of pictures of the Holy Grail in the room of his son, Henry A., Jr., aged 6, and Margaret Tarrant's picture "All Things Bright and Beautiful" in the room of Patricia May, his 3-year-old daughter.

JUDGE HAMMOND'S SON CLEARED IN AUTO DEATH

A charge of manslaughter against Franklin T. Hammond, Jr., twenty, of Cambridge, son of Judge Franklin T. Hammond, was dismissed today in East Cambridge District Court. Testimony of witnesses exonerated Hammond in the death of the Rev. [illegible] Dougherty, elderly Cambridge minister, who was killed by Hammond's automobile.

Hammond was fined [illegible] on a charge of driving a car without an operator's license.

Police Sergeant Winslow testified that the aged minister was in the habit of walking in the street. Mrs. Alice [illegible], who lives across the street from the scene of the accident at Kirkland and Irving streets, said that the street light was out at the time.

'OLD IRONSIDES' HEADED FOR JUNK PILE

the Boston Evening American, "it must fail."

In view of the fact that the grand old fighting ship is tied up at Charlestown Navy Yard, where 70,000 persons visited her in the year just past, and in view of the close association of the Constitution with Boston—she was built in this city, and she sailed from here nearly 128 years ago to go out and meet the Guerriere—it probably will surprise patriotic Bostonians to learn that Boston is among the large cities which have said "No" to the "Save Old Ironsides" Fund.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur is making a personal appeal to the Boston school authorities for permission to permit the campaign to proceed here. Massachusetts, as a whole, has done nobly.

Somerville sent her school children to the Navy Yard by thousands to visit America's naval shrine and hear the thrilling story of the Constitution's great exploits from spokesmen for the Navy Department. The result was a collection in the Somerville schools amounting to $601.88.

Cambridge pupils have sent in $407.46; Lowell, $400; Haverhill, $476.

BANNER TOWN.

But the banner town of this Commonwealth, thus far, is Medford, whose young people collected in their schools and turned over to the local lodge of Elks an even $800. No other city in the State, except Somerville, has done better than half as much.

The appeal to the children does not mean that "Uncle Sam is hard up," and that there was no other way to get the money. The present method was adopted at the earnest suggestion of the Secretary of the Navy, and with the warm endorsement of President Coolidge, because it was felt that a study of the record of this historic ship will turn the thought of the youth of our country to many of the most important developments of the Nation.

There are more than 800,000 members of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. A contribution of one dollar apiece would complete the Old Ironsides Fund in jigtime and anyone who knows the record of the B. P. O. E. for patriotic, educational and welfare work, at home and abroad, knows that the Elks are quite capable of doing the thing in just that way.

But this is not desirable. What the President would like, what Congress hand in mind, what Secretary Wilbur and the men of the Navy hoped, what the Elks intend, is:

1.—To interest the boys and girls of America in the early history of our country, especially in the history of Old Ironsides.

2.—To create a sentiment for this National keepsake, so that it may never be forgotten.

3.—To give EVERY boy and girl in our great National family an opportunity to help in the rebuilding of this historic ship.

BARRED FROM SCHOOLS.

There has been no formal, or at least no public, vote on the fund by the "Save Old Ironsides Fund" on the School Committee of Boston, but sometime last year the Boston board decided in executive session to place a level with all other "campaign" and bar it from the schools.

New York and some other large cities have followed the same course.

Navy officials cannot believe that the members of the Boston School Committee in its action of last Summer voted with all the facts before them.

To interest the school children of Boston in the frigate Constitution, the officers of the navy maintain, will be to interest them in history.

If Boston is to close its schools to the fund, the men engaged in a great work believe and say, there can be little hope of interesting the rest of the country. Boston was the Constitution's birthplace. This was the gallant frigate's home port in the days of its youth and vigor. Here she has passed her old age. Here she awaits today the verdict of the nation she has served.

Pleads for Frigate

REAR ADM. PHILIP ANDREWS.

"The frigate Constitution," Rear Admiral Andrews says, "has carried the Stars and Stripes with honor, in peace and war, for 128 years.

"The American people owe this great ship a debt that only restoration by popular contribution can repay.

"The active career of the Constitution spanned 82 years. Since 1882 she has been a naval shrine and museum, visited annually by thousands.

"Her end at the hands of shipwreckers is near unless the people of the country come to her rescue with patriotic contributions.

"The Navy will rebuild her as soon as the remainder of the 'Save Old Ironsides' Fund is raised. It is a small amount to preserve such a precious symbol of the great spirit and mighty deeds of our forefathers."

While the campaign is a children's drive, the Elks have not hoped to raise the entire $500,000 by donations from the children but in many cities have organized older groups—those of the Junior High and High schools—to ask for larger donations from adults.

Governor Fuller gave $500 to the Fund; Mr. A. C. Ratshesky, $500; Mr. Charles H. Taylor, of the Boston Globe, $200; United States Senator Butler, United States Senator Hale, of Maine, and Samuel Insull, $100 each. Congressman Louis A. Frothingham was the donor of $50.

Mr. Ratshesky, president of the United States Trust Company of Boston, is treasurer of the fund; Past Grand Exalted Ruler James R. Nicholson of the Elks is a member of the National Executive Committee and Lieut. Commander E. S. R. Brandt, of the local Navy Yard, is the secretary.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.

President Allan Forbes of the State Street Trust, Mr. Charles E. Cotting of Lee Higginson & Co., Mr. Frank W. Remick of Kidder, Peabody & Co., President John R. Macomber of Harris, Forbes & Co., Mr. James J. Phelan of Hornblower & Weeks, and Mr. Ratshesky, are members of the Advisory Finance Committee.

Boston lodge No. 10 of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, with about 7,000 members, ranks third in size in the country. The Elks of Massachusetts number approximately 50,000.

In 1830, when the Constitution was condemned by the Naval Commissioners as unseaworthy and ordered to be broken up, the vessel was saved by a poem, Oliver Wendell Holmes's "Old Ironsides," which so aroused public sentiment that the Navy Department ordered the ship to be rebuilt. AT BOSTON.

The Constitution has served under every President, from Washington to Coolidge. She stands for a great deal in the hearts of the American people.

Five Bostonians may save her, again, namely, the lady and gentlemen of the School Committee, by permitting young Bostonians to come to the aid of an old and heroic Bostonian—and imbibe of American history while they aid.

"Old Ironsides" is going to be saved, or "Old Ironsides" is going to be scrapped, and the School Committee of the city of her birth, the city of her glorious youth and gallant service, the city of her revered old age, is going to say which.

Appeal to School Boards to Help Save "Ironsides"

By REAR ADMIRAL PHILIP ANDREWS, U. S. N.,

Commandant First Naval District, Chairman National Committee, "Save Old Ironsides" Fund.

Early last Summer the Secretary of the Navy, Curtis D. Wilbur, invited the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, through their grand exalted ruler, John G. Price, to organize the children of America and collect their mites towards the restoration of "Old Ironsides." Since then the Elks in 861 lodges have carried this patriotic message to the children.

But in some of the big cities, like Boston, New York and Philadelphia, the Elks have been obstructed by a rule of the school boards, forbidding the carrying on of the campaign.

The Secretary of the Navy, despite this ruling by some of the boards, feels that "Old Ironsides" should be saved through the children of the nation, and he is now appealing to the various school boards where this rule is in force to open the schools to our campaign in order that the Elks may carry the message to them.

Secretary Wilbur has addressed a letter to the Boston school committee, with the hope that Boston will be first of the great cities to rescind its ruling and permit the campaign to proceed. If it cannot be carried to the school children of the big cities, it must fail.

Wherever the Elks have been allowed into the schools the campaign has been received with great enthusiasm and there has been a generous response by the children. The hope of "Old Ironsides" now lies in the schools of the big cities of the country. It will cost $500,000 to recondition her and there is only about one-third of that amount in sight.

COYNE TO URGE PUBLIC OWNERSHIP OF THE "L"

Public ownership of the Boston Elevated Street Railway Company will be advocated by Representative Francis X. Coyne at a public meeting next Sunday night in Bloomfield Hall, Dorchester. Coyne dissented from the majority report of the special committee of the legislature which sat on the Elevated problem during the Summer and which recommended continuance of the public control act for thirty years.

GEM THIEVES DIVE OUT WINDOW TO ESCAPE

Jewelry valued at more than $400 was stolen from the home of Edward W. Bullock, No. 15 Summit avenue, Somerville, by two men, who escaped by diving out a side window into a snowbank when they heard an automobile drive up to the house. The automobile had been driven into the yard by a neighbor. Entrance was gained by forcing the front door with a jimmy. The men were described as being about 22 years of age, wearing caps and light overcoats with belts.

Washington, Jan. 15—Presenting his speech with the announcement that for the first time in [illegible] he was "forced to abandon the [illegible] of his party," Senator [illegible] Fernald (Republican) of Maine declared in the Senate this afternoon he would vote against American adherence to the World Court.

Senator Fernald said he always [illegible] and [illegible] "an [illegible] and [illegible]," and [illegible] "the most [illegible]" [illegible] him to oppose [illegible] President [illegible] of the party. This [illegible] the welfare of the nation was at stake.

Under notice that they must either talk or consent to a vote on the question, Senate opponents of the court continued their assaults on the Swanson resolution to ratification with the Harding-Coolidge reservations.

That opponents of the World Court were sparring for time became apparent when Senator Blease, Democrat, South Carolina, launched into the reading of Washington's farewell address with the announcement that if senators proceeded with other affairs while he was speaking, he would feel it "not the slightest discourtesy."

League Futile in Santa Role, Says Prof. Hart

A pointed attack on the League of Nations by Albert Bushnell Hart, professor of the science of government at Harvard University and one of the leading educators of the country, took delegates to the Radcliffe school of Politics and Foreign affairs completely by surprise today.

He said: "I am a heretic outside of the pale. I am at odds with the League of Nations advocates who believe that the world will be saved probably not today or tomorrow but surely next week, by internationalism.

"I don't believe in Santa Claus and by the same process of reasoning I don't believe that the League of Nations will be a Santa Claus that will fill the stocking of every nation on every Christmas."

The very principle of the League, equality of all nations, is a false premise, Dr. Hart said.

The attack on the League came during his lecture on "American and Foreign Politics."

MUSSOLINI RELIGIOUS MARRIAGE IS DENIED

Rome, Jan. 15 (A.P.)—Official quarters today denied the report published in London that Premier Mussolini and his wife, Rachele, who were united by a civil marriage, had gone through a religious marriage ceremony during his recent visit to Milan. In any case, it was stated such action by the Premier would have no connection with his desire for a complete rapprochement between the Church and State.

Fire Rages in West Virginia Shafts Where Men Are Entombed After Blast

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 15.—Rescue crews clad in gas masks today began search of the gasfilled chambers of the Jameson Coal & Coke Company's mine No. 8, in which thirty-eight men were entombed by an explosion.

DEATH CHEATS ROMANCE IN 2 OLD HEARTS

Suitor of 75 Sends Back Unused License as School-Day Sweetheart Passes Away

An unused marriage license was returned to Newton city clerk today.

Behind it lay not the usual story of a disrupted romance of youth, but a story of two sweethearts kept apart by Fate for more than sixty years and finally cheated by Death.

For Mrs. Eunice J. Esten of No. 11 Wesley street, Newton Corner, is dead at the age of seventy-five, and her fiance of the same age is sorrowfully preparing for her burial.

Just [illegible] ago Alonzo H. Blood got the license and began a watch by her bedside, waiting patiently, until he [illegible] the marriage performed [illegible] Mrs. Esten became well enough to go through the ceremony.

There were no marks or identifying name on the boat to aid in establishing her ownership or the possible whereabouts of any who may have been using her.

TESTER SHOWS IF YOU'LL MAKE GOOD ON JOB

Philadelphia, Jan. 15 (A.P.).—A machine for calculating the degree of success a prospective employe is likely to have in a job is on display at the Franklin Institute. Its inventor is Stuart C. Dodd, a graduate student in psychology at Princeton. The machine has been used to show the relationship between the results of psychological tests given the applicant for a job and his likelihood of "making good." Mr. Dodd said his apparatus would show "the amount of relationship between any phenomenon that can be expressed in numbers."

Its chief advantage, he explained, is that it performs involved calculations much more rapidly and exactly than one can do them with pencil and paper.

It also can be used in calculating the likelihood of scholarship success of school pupils or college students.

KNOCKED INTO SEA, DROWNS

Ansell Murphy sailed out of Gloucester with the schooner Catherine but he was not aboard when the craft reached the Fish Pier today. The flag of the schooner was at half mast.

The fisherman was drowned off Georges Bank last Saturday, knocked into the sea by the leach of the mainsail that was being furled.

When the accident occurred the Catherine was on the northern edge of Georges and three dories were manned in an attempt to save the fisherman. Weighted down with heavy rubber boots and heavy waterproof, he sank, however, before any of the boats could reach him.

THE THEATRE Here and There

Meet Mr. Goldwyn
The Lad Had Vision
Films "Stella Dallas"
Roving Impresario

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THERE is more romance in filmland than is shown on the screen. It is not the romance of love and kisses but the romance of seething ambition measured in dollars and cents. Acting in pictures is one thing; making pictures pay has been quite another item of personal interest to many courageous souls. Men of vision seldom fail and next to being one of the niftiest sellers of gloves to country stores a few years back Samuel Goldwyn has carried a heavy stock of vision, a full run of courage and, by instinct, an inclination to take a chance.

HOPE deferred may have entered into Goldwyn's early filming operations, but not in sufficient force to blight the vision or stem the ambition of the young man who had but recently paid $4 a week for his room in Boston's South End and who thought that was quite enough to pay for plain lodging. Hope achieved finds Samuel still smiling—still determined. Oh, yes, Samuel Goldwyn, besides reclining comfortably as the producer of "Stella Dallas" at the Colonial—called by many the greatest picture of the generation—also indulges in a prosperous outlook on life as one of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer group of film celebrities.

LET'S return to the romance of the films as indicated in the exploits of Samuel Goldwyn. Neither Horatio Alger, Jr., nor Oliver Optic ever wrote a better story for the American boy to ponder upon and take to heart. Seventeen years ago Mr. Goldwyn carried a sample case packed to the last cubic inch with gloves; not the best gloves in the world, he admits, but still good enough to sell to small town shopkeepers.

YOU see, Goldwyn covered suburban Boston—not the down-town stores. That implied two things; he wasn't old enough to handle the big trade and, besides, it required youth, courage and endurance to carry the battle of business into the country stretches. Goldwyn, it is reported, sold gloves where none had been sold before; he made money. And he tucked it away in the old brown sock where some day it could be called upon for bolder ventures.

IT WAS that vision of bigger things in pictures that swept Goldwyn out of gloves into celluloid. The days were not altogether happy, but they were productive; there were moments of battle and strife, and months of that old and familiar hope long deferred—but there was always hope. The Goldwyn achievement in "Stella Dallas" is one of the outstanding triumphs of the decade—and it is all Goldwyn. He discovered the story, selected the cast and produced the picture. In these works the glory is undivided—it is all Goldwyn's.

CHANGE IN BILL.—It is announced that the opera scheduled for Saturday afternoon, January 30, by the Chicago Opera company, will be "The Marriage of Figaro" instead of "Faust," as previously given out. The principal singers will be Edith Mason, Charles Hackett and Georges Baklanoff

Vanities Booked for Florida Trip.

EARL CARROLL certainly is a roaming impesario. Following the engagement of Vanities at the Shubert, Mr. Carroll expects to pack all his scenery, principals and gay ladies of the chorus into the good ship Alexander and move upon Coral Gables, Miami, Florida, to open a new theatre in that growing community. It may be said in all fairness that Florida weather is more in keeping with Mr. Carroll's costuming effects than that delivered in Boston during January.

WELCH GOT GRAPE JUICE INSPIRATION IN RELIGION

Jamestown, N. Y., Jan., 15 (A.P.).—Unfermented grape juice was produced by Dr. Charles E. Welch in 1869 in consequence of a passion to serve God by helping his church give at its communion the "fruit of the vine" instead of the "cup of devils," it is related in the will of Dr. Welch, which has been admitted to probate here. Dr. Welch, who amassed a fortune from the manufacture of grape juice, died a few days ago at St. Petersburg, Fla.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno Give Dinner and Dance for Their Niece, Miss Helen Thorndike

"NO. 46 BEACON STREET" Was ablaze with gorgeous masses of pink roses for the dinner and dance Mr. and Mrs. J. Brooks Fenno gave in honor of their niece, Miss Helen Thorndike, a prominent bud of the season who is just making a somewhat belated, but, nevertheless, triumphant social entree.

A DINNER FOR THIRTY-SIX preceded that portion of the evening and [illegible] sacred to the dance. The [illegible] were guests at [illegible] tables, and later [illegible] engineered by J. Brooks Fenno, Jr., officiated in the ballroom.

FOR THIS DOUBLE [illegible] Miss Thorndike was in a [illegible] and silver [illegible] with pink, a lovely [illegible] ballroom [illegible] as well [illegible] prettiness.

INTERESTING AS WAS [illegible] equally [illegible] in the social arena during [illegible] February [illegible] Miss [illegible] Thayer Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ellis Mason of [illegible] street, takes [illegible] youth.

HER PARENTS [illegible] the [illegible] for formal soiree, and [illegible] will be the [illegible] preliminary dinner [illegible] no debutante affair [illegible] may be [illegible]. Miss Mason is a charming girl and [illegible].

WHEN THE CONTE BIANCAMANO [illegible] for the Mediterranean next week she takes a highly interesting and [illegible] distinctive passenger list, [illegible] Herman Gade, Minister Plenipotentiary to Norway.

ACCOMPANYING the Minister [illegible] Extraordinary [illegible] his wife and daughter, after a Boston [illegible] during which they were guests at the Copley-Plaza and received many courtesies from their circle of friends in the resident aristocracy.

FROM ITALY THE Gades go to North Africa for a motor trip in that fascinating land of sun and sand of which the guidebooks speak so alluringly. Then, following an interval in Norway, further diplomatic missions take them [illegible] round the world again to South America.

MRS. HARVEY BUNDY figures prominently both socially and philanthropically. She is [illegible] of the Senior Supper Dance and a patroness for the Municipal League's concert on Monday.

STATELY DRAWING ROOMS [illegible]

AN ENORMOUS DININGROOM, a portion of the more modern extension added a decade or more ago, is massively done in the style of that time, and a [illegible] now gives a [illegible] outlook adding [illegible] as a notable whole.

THIS EVENING'S Senior Supper Dance at the Copley Plaza is to be unusually brilliant, even for those chic affairs which [illegible] in the [illegible] Mrs. Haskell [illegible] for eight at a table [illegible]

MRS. HALLAM L. MOVIUS [illegible] Miss [illegible] fourteen guests. Mrs. Louis Curtis, Jr., presides over sixteen in the middle of [illegible] that bands the dance floor.

THE SHERWOOD [illegible] party of fourteen, [illegible] Minot, Jr., party of twelve, [illegible] Amory group of fourteen, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Green's sixteen people, the Edward [illegible] Mrs. W. T. L. [illegible] with ten and Mrs. Robert H. [illegible] group of similar proportions each lend eclat.

BY FAR THE largest and most important supper group has for chatelaine Mrs. Randolph F. Tucker (Mona House), daughter of the Colonel House of Wilson Administration fame. She and Mr. Tucker entertain three dozen at their Chestnut Hill place and later bring them on to the Copley Plaza.

A YOUNG MATRON trio have hostess roles—Mrs. Phineas Shaw Sprague (Lucy Carnegie), Mrs. Charles A. Coolidge, Jr. (Alison Jones), and Mrs. Thomas W. Storrow (Cornelia Fiske). Mrs. A. Lynde Cochrane brings eighteen guests and Mrs. J. Wells Farley ten.

MONDAY AND TUESDAY finds the [illegible] troupe back in Cambridge presenting this year's theatrical [illegible] in their own theatre.

"I AM THE Waldorf RED APPLE MAN"

"Black printers' ink doesn't do justice to my countenance: but if you could see me as I naturally am, you would note that my face is lighted by the rosy blush of those wonderful red apples which have brought so much fame to the orchards of New England.

"I am an insignia, an emblem, a symbol. And as such, it is my lifelong pleasure to represent something—stand for something that is of very great value to you.

"And this something is—a clean place to eat. A place where every sanitary precaution is taken; where good food, expertly cooked and quickly served, is always to be had; and where employees are tuned up to the fundamental Waldorf ideal of courteous attention to the wishes of more than fifty million people who eat at Waldorf every year.

"This, I believe, is something real to symbolize—something very much worth while, since it means honest and constructive public service in catering to the food necessities of inner man. What, I ask you, could be more important than that?

"When your next mealtime rolls around, will you test out the truth of what I've said—At the Sign of the Red Apple?

"Come for breakfast, lunch, supper—or for a bite in between. This invitation applies equally to children, women and men—all are welcome. Come!"

Get Ready for Old-Time Dance Contest Monday

A Live Serial of Love and Temptation Right Here In Boston

READ THIS FIRST.

FLOSSIE and MARY ROSE MIDDLETON are two pretty sisters, the daughters of a widowed mother. They work for Dexter & Co., big Congress street bond firm.

Mary Rose is secretary to the sales manager, JOHN MANNERS, and is in love with him, although the office gossips say he's engaged to a girl of wealth, DORIS HINIG. Because of her feeling for him, Mary Rose refuses a repeated offer of marriage from TOM FITZROY, a successful young doctor.

[illegible]

"I'm going to dance with the black-haired stranger," Flossie announced.

Mary Rose discovers that Flossie is carrying on a flirtation with the president of the concern, HILARY DEXTER, although she's engaged to Dexter's secretary, SAM JESSUP. When Mary Rose intervenes the affair with Dexter seems to be ended. Then one day Mary Rose comes upon Flossie in Dexter's arms in a lonely part of the building. When she scolds Flossie about her behavior, Flossie says it's not her fault men find her so attractive!

Flossie becomes head of the files department, with her chum, ALICE JAMES, as assistant. Under them the department goes to pieces.

The pair go on a "wild" party one night with Dexter and some other people, and Flossie drinks too much, comes home at four a.m. and is put to bed by Mary Rose and her mother. It is then that MRS. MIDDLETON first begins to worry about Flossie's flapperish morals. Alice James tells Sam about the party and Flossie gets even by having her fired!

Manners grows more and more attentive to Mary Rose, and one night when they are having a long talk about love and marriage, Mary Rose looks up and sees Doris Hinig [illegible] watching them from the doorway.

(Now Go on With the Story)

CHAPTER XXXI

[illegible]

D[illegible] cheeks were [illegible] cold [illegible] eyes sparkled coldly in the glow from the green shaded [illegible] Mary Rose's desk.

There was a yellow chrysanthemum pinned on the [illegible] and a [illegible] satin hat was crushed down on the [illegible] tops of her hair. As she moved a soft fragrance of rose perfume came from her clothes and her hair and her powdered skin.

Everything that the dressmaker and milliner and the beauty specialist could do for a woman they had done for her. And they had done their best. They had given her a beauty nature had never given her.

Mary Rose looked at her, and then glanced down at her own grubby hands and the white vestee of her dress. It was not as white as it had been that morning. It was impossible to keep clean in the office.

What chance had she, she wondered, against the full swaying power of a girl who could spend all day and a small fortune in a beauty shop if she wanted to? This girl who had nothing to do but make herself beautiful and attractive for John Manners?

"Hello, John John!" Doris greeted him gayly, and she walked past Mary Rose as if she had never seen her. "I left Muriel's bridge party early so I could drive you home."

She laid one of her hands, in its spotless glove, on John's shoulder with a little caress.

"That was awfully nice of you. Sorry, but I have my own car downstairs," he answered stiffly.

Doris shrugged her shoulders. "You can send it home. Please be nice to me, and come along."

Her eyes pleaded with him, and there was a look of fear in them—fear that he was going to refuse her. That look told Mary Rose just how uncertain Doris Hinig was of

THE Amherst Student Association, following a move by the Student Council, has voted to abandon hockey as an inter-collegiate sport for 1926.

There is a lesson to be drawn from this action by [illegible] the direct cause of disbanding the team and [illegible] schedule was the lack of an outside coach.

[illegible] of the faculty committee on student act[illegible] the [illegible] said: "Never in the past fifteen years [illegible] a regular outside coach in this sport." And [illegible] deploring the situation, outlined the result: [illegible] injuries, dearth of material, and a disinterested [illegible]

A short [illegible] speculation was rife concerning the [illegible]visability of [illegible] trained coaches for collegiate sports.

It doesn't take many words to point out, nor much insight to deduce the moral from the Amherst development.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER R. HORTON

It has been seen that poise in the golf swing begins with the stance, and I have sought to show in previous articles that the stance is perhaps more important to the average player than any other phase of his game, especially until he reaches such skill that he can omit giving it such careful attention.

POISE BEGINS WITH THE STANCE.

Few expert players there are, however, who do not step back now and then and examine again their stance, for well they know that most golf troubles and faults have their source in that factor of the swing.

QUEENS COUNSEL

by Marie Queen of Roumania

DON'T ADMIT IT!

I KNEW a [illegible]

[illegible] put on green instead of blue [illegible]

Now that is [illegible]

It is all very well to be bad-tempered. But keep it to yourself. Don't make MY life unsafe with it. Don't think that by admitting your fault you are absolved from its responsibility. Don't take refuge in "That's my way."

It is no business of yours if I wear blue or green. A nice place the world would be if each time I wore a color somebody didn't like I found the air a-whiz with footstools because hurling footstools was somebody's way of self-expression.

No, no! If we begin admitting our vices, it is the first step to indulging in them. Confession is good, but in the right place. It is too easy to imagine that by frankly confessing a disagreeable peculiarity you will make us tolerate it once and for all. All men in battle are afraid. But they don't admit it and stay back. Often the bravest are those who had fear and overcame it with soul-wracking effort.

Giving way to your fears, your tempers, your cowardice, is the first step to something worse.

A member of a family I was connected with was a selfish woman. She wanted to lead her own life. It was a burden to recognize obligation and the responsibility. She was in a high position, but refused to live up to it in any way.

Little by little she began the legend that she was mad, mad as a hatter! This was a stroke of genius. Never again need she do anything that bored her. She was mad, no one could expect her to behave like anyone else.

She sacrificed her husband, her children, her position. One by one her duties, obligations, went to the wall. She was mad, what-ho!

No. Believe me, if you have nasty little impulses, crush them in time. "Assume a virtue if you have it not." Don't admit your weaknesses or you will be mastered by them and no hope of retreat!

GENIUS IN THE BUD

NATURE [illegible] skipped a generation [illegible]

The boy arrived at school, carrying an eight-ounce bottle filled with a black, mysterious fluid. [illegible]

[illegible] George [illegible]

In school work the boy stood alone. He had to, for no one else was so completely dumb to every kind of reasoning. He detested reading and hated arithmetic, and he was presented with elementary chemistry books by the school and in this manner was induced to plug along because he was crazy to understand chemical formulae.

Later George progressed in everything he could apply to his pet hobby, but all the king's horses could not drag him into literature. At sixteen he had a working knowledge of chemistry equal to that of the average college graduate and seemed to possess a sixth sense in chemical analysis.

At seventeen he developed a facial cream that now sells in six figure lots and is nationally advertised. "What became of the "Cat Biscuit Corporation?" George's cracker meal, meat and chemicals were to be employed "FOR GETTING RID OF CATS" but the company became insolent because the [illegible] the capital stock in soda water.

[illegible] Rose listened to the faint [illegible] that came to them [illegible] the closed door. Then she [illegible] answer its summons. As she [illegible]

[illegible]

"Here! Stop that, Floss," Tom broke in, frowning at her across the table.

"Well it's not my fault. I had to prove that he was looking at me, didn't I? That over there"—she wagged her curly head at Sam—"thinks nobody ever notices me but him. Come on, Tom, let's Charleston—" and she was out on the dance floor in an instant.

The floor was crowded, but every one in the room was soon watching Flossie in her scant dress that was the color of new April leaves. For Flossie was not only beautiful, but she could dance. And as she danced, her lovely eyes swept the room restlessly, as if they were looking for some one.

Mary Rose noticed that the black haired man in the corner watched her like a hawk and that every now and then Flossie would toss him a half smile.

At seven o'clock that [illegible] sat side by side in the twilight of a moving picture show on Washington street. For Mary Rose [illegible] was Paradise—nothing short of Paradise.

And as she sat there, looking at the screen, but not seeing it, she felt Manners' hand slowly close over hers.

"Oh, no," she said [illegible] and tried to draw it away.

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE STORY'S THE THING

By Jack Woodford

R[illegible]

Creative Impulse

[illegible] of Amer[illegible] letters for Rogers had [illegible] in clear rhetoric the modern American business man, and as Roger knew no business men, and was therefore in no way hampered in his work, he [illegible]

[illegible] fell in love with [illegible] and wr[illegible] who was [illegible] and beaut[illegible] her babyhood in the bathroom. In due course the picture was produced and sent out over the circuit.

Now it happens that when the picture reached Yuma, Arizona, Miss A[illegible]

Idea Formed

As Miss Forbes watched [illegible] unfold [illegible] a screen [illegible] itself [illegible] letters, and was [illegible] it was to be seen that Miss Forbes had used in its entirety the plot conceived of by Mr. Roger Ellington Caswell in his rose garden, under somber Italian skies, as he had drunk in the sweet fragrance of a rose. Alas and alack! From [illegible] long arm of the [illegible] to file a [illegible] Miss Forbes for plagiarism.

With [illegible] horror Miss Forbes [illegible] Roger's book which she had [illegible] and now [illegible] that she had indeed used the [illegible] plot which Roger had used and [illegible] in her mind [illegible] writer [illegible] a discerning young lady she [illegible] into this impasse.

In due course the case came up [illegible] Tuttle, a former Karat Weeserner, who had [illegible] some time before for the more genteel art of [illegible], took it under advisement.

Almost tearfully Miss Forbes related how she had not read Roger's [illegible] until long after she had written her own novel, only to hear the [illegible] representative of Roger argue [illegible] the only thing on [illegible] that Miss Forbes could say and that therefore and heretofore and because of and inasmuch as [illegible] and the other and appellate court in Hoboken, New Jersey, had decided in the case of Mump versus Gump and the party of the first part in company with the party of the second part, whereas and soforth and so on ad infinitum. . .

Wearied by the arguments of the plaintiff's representative Judge Tuttle at last took a hand.

"Now look't," he said wisely, leaning forward to [illegible] over his [illegible] desk with [illegible] "This here young lady" he [illegible] glance at Miss Forbes who was [illegible] "didn't [illegible] this here guy's plot because she never read the book [illegible] after she wrote her own story—you heard her say so herself. Furthermore, Miss Forbes is an honest, patriotic American who pays her taxes in this here country while the other guy is a [illegible] or else he lives in Italy. Therefore, it is plain to be seen that there is no cause for a judgment here and I dismiss the case."

However no really good idea ever crawls into a hole nor pulls the hole after it, so Mr. Roger Ellington Caswell's plot went marching on.

Not Discovered

Miss Forbes' book was read in New York by an ambitious young lady just climbing the steep hill to Parnassus, and, in due course, came from her pen a long, narrative poem, which changed the idea in Miss Forbes' book back into the motion picture version. But as nobody read poetry except other poets this perfidy was not discovered and, if it had been, moving picture people, who are [illegible] broad mind[illegible] and generous, would [illegible] thought for an instant of troubling the young lady for this little borrowing stunt.

Still, like the brook, the idea went skipping [illegible] and a young man who was [illegible] a poet and a short story writer lifted bodily from the long narrative poem part of the [illegible] and incorporated it in a novelette which he shortly sold to a magazine, little dreaming that he had returned Roger Ellington's idea back to its original form again.

And so like the Wandering Jew, Roger's idea, conceived in a rose garden, stalked back and forth and in and out across the world until one day it came home to him in the shape of another novel by a contemporary.

"So," said Roger aloud to one of his roses, "this is the way it's done, eh?" And forthwith Roger [illegible] and by proxy plagiarized his own idea and sent it forth in a new dress, somewhat pleased, to be sure, with the knowledge that having written a novel he had also created, with no additional effort whatsoever, scenarios, short stories, other novels, narrative poems and perhaps even advertising copy.

"The pen," he murmured to himself in thinking of this, "is mightier than all the guinea pigs in the world."

COOK-COOS by Ted Cook

PROBABLY the most pathetic case that has come to light this year appears in the questions and answers department of a morning newspaper.

Because you, too, may be suffering, the message of hope is here reprinted:

"I know exactly what you suffer, Miss A., for I went through the same experience in that city, and so apparently does every newcomer. Now I'm sure that fleas have no particular preference for certain people. They bite all, indiscriminately. But apparently they do not poison some, so that these people do not notice the biting. What it is that makes the flea bite poisonous to some and not to others nobody knows. (The same is true of other pests.) The natives of that city I know are rarely bothered, so I think that they must have developed an immunity to them, and that's all the hope I can hold out for you. Sooner or later, you, too, will be immune. I can give you this hope, for I know that happened to me."

Perhaps if "Miss A" will take an occasional gulp of ordinary drug store gin the fleas will stop biting her.

At least, the flea will bite but once.

* * *

And instead of the flea poisoning the newcomer the newcomer will poison the flea.

TODAY'S NEWS PICTURE

First picture to reach America showing discoveries of scientists in the Gobi desert. In the above photograph a member of the expedition, Professor Rock N. Rye, has stumbled unexpectedly upon a gigantic dinosaur, which is seen on its nest. Needless to say, the dinosaur resisted stubbornly when the professor sought to dislodge it. This, scientists believe, was largely due to the fact that the kleagle dinosaur (as the female is called) was practically fossilized.

A king with his dukes, sure speedy and tough;
With an arm like a crowbar and a skull like a rock,
He laid many a champ on the mat with his sock.

He soon won the crown, plus a barrel of dough,
And friends flocked around him thicker than snow.
A high kicking Chorine named Dolly McCole
Grafted herself to Hector's bankroll.
Then parties and night life became Hector's joy,
He paid all the bills like a good little boy.
A couple months later he found out the joke;
His friends had all vanished and Hector was broke.

Then back to the ring—he staged a grand bout,
That in his dream [illegible] goof laid him out.
His punch couldn't crack a mere china dish,
So thus ends the tale of Hector the "fish."

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

WE were up in Northern India—near the Thibetan border and you should have seen the strange house in which we stopped one night to rest.

It was dusk when we arrived there, but Bobby had inspected the place as only a little boy can and before we went to sleep that night he said to me:

"Foxy Grandpa, there's a funny animal out there in that shack called a llama and the man takes splendid care of it."

The next morning our Hindu friend came out of the stable leading the llama by a halter, got up on his back and rode off.

Bobby was nervous and fidgety all that day and when our friend returned, toward evening, Bobby hung around him like a fly around a cherry pie.

I managed to explain to the Hindu that my little friend would like to ride his llama, and when he understood me he grinned and showed his white teeth and almost touched ground with his turban.

"Great," said Bobby the next morning when he was up on the llama's back and ready to trot down the road.

His little face was like a full moon as he turned and waved to me, but when he returned his face was not so bright. I wondered if he had had an accident, for I couldn't imagine what had happened.

He came and sat down by me and I said:

"Well, Bobby, tell me about it. What kind of a gait has a llama?"

"He's all right as far as the riding goes, Foxy Grandpa. But llamas are very queer."

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Foxy Grandpa," said Bobby. "Do you know what that llama did? I had ridden him quite a distance when he turned his head right around and what did he do, but spit right in my face!"

"That was just his way of telling you he thought you had ridden him long enough," said Bunny. "Most of them will do that."

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

YOUR child may be the victim of rheumatic pains or of a frankly developed case of rheumatism.

Rheumatism in childhood, like rheumatism in any other period of life, is the effect of some very definite cause.

This cause is generally found to consist in the absorption of germs belonging to the variety called streptococci. This absorption may take place from infected tonsils or adenoids or sinuses or from neglected and suppurating gums or from chronically constipated intestines. The most frequent sources of infection in children are tonsils and adenoids.

As a rule when these sources of infection are removed the rheumatic symptoms clear up within the next few days.

If, however, this is not done promptly and the rheumatic symptoms are permitted to develop, serious consequences are liable to ensue.

When either the lining or the covering of the heart becomes the seat of so-called rheumatic inflammation, the resulting diseased changes are liable to become permanent and develop into a chronic invalidism.

In a limited number of cases of rheumatism, having their origin in infection from tonsils and adenoids, the resulting inflammation occurs in certain of the joints. In some of these cases excrescences form on the ends of the bones within the sack surrounding the joint, resulting in permanent lameness.

There has been much said about the "rheumatic state" and about "inherited rheumatism" and "rheumatic families."

These words are now known to mean simply a persistence of the original sources of infection.

It follows, therefore, that in the presence of rheumatic symptoms, however slight, it is important that you have your physician promptly locate and remove the inevitable source of infection.

DURANT LARGE FIGURE IN WALL STREET

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Many explanations have been offered for the uncertain actions of the stock market this week, but perhaps none fits more closely into accord with the facts than that which says considerable fears have been aroused by the injury of W. C. Durant, former Bostonian, in a train accident. Mr. Durant, credited with having cleaned up many millions in the rise of Cast Iron Pipe and other favorites, is considered by many to be the greatest "player" of the market in all time. Reassuring bulletins from the hospital have not succeeded in entirely allaying fears concerning his condition.

W. C. Durant.

New Haven Railroad, I am told, is to issue another very fine earnings statement. The surprisingly good showing consistently made by this railroad during the past several months has led to considerable accumulation of the stock. Recently we mentioned that another bull pool had been organized in the issue. Formation of bull pools appears to be an inevitable result of increasing earnings these days.

Benjamin Franklin is probably still the most quoted authority on thrift, but President Raymond B. Cox of the Webster and Atlas National Bank adds another popular American figure to the list. In a letter to depositors he states: "Theodore Roosevelt once said—'The habit of saving money, while it stiffens the will, also brightens the energies. If you would be sure that you are beginning right, begin to save.'"

Companies operating electric railways in the United States in 1925 totaled 759, a survey just completed shows. The miles of single track in use is placed at 46,740, and the number of cars operated, all classes, amounted to 104,716. With the number of electric railways in receivership gradually decreasing, the outlook for the industry is more favorable.

RETIREMENT OF GARY RUMOR GETS A SETBACK

The election of Judge Elbert H. Gary as a director of the United States Realty and Improvement Company was looked upon in the financial district as a further refutation of the reports that he was preparing to retire as chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. It is not likely that Judge Gary, if he were getting ready to retire, would accept a place on the directorate of another large corporation, according to the reasoning of many who discussed the matter.

World Court Does as League Tells It

Opponents of the League of Nations' "World Court," which we are asked to join, insist that it is simply one of the tools used in dominating Europe by the Great Powers which control the League's Supreme Council, and hence the League.

Two cases seem to support this claim; at least these cases prove the "World Court" to be something very different from all tribunals of justice that we Americans know anything about.

In the latest case, Mosul, the "World Court" was not allowed to decide on the justice of the case; whether the oil fields should rightly go to Turkey or to England. All the "World Court" had a chance to do was to give an "advisory opinion" to the Supreme Council. The Council asked if it had the right to fix the boundaries on Mosul. And it asked whether the Turkish representative, added to the Council for this case, could vote in the decision.

The "World Court," in an elaborate opinion, advised that the Council was authorized by the Lausanne Treaty to fix the Mosul boundary for good and all, and that the Turk on the Council could not vote. Then the Council proceeded to vote the Mosul oil fields to England, one of the Great Powers.

Now, Turkey in the Lausanne Treaty had agreed to "refer" the boundary matter to the Supreme Council because Lord Curzon of England had promised her that the Council's decision must be unanimous, and so the Turk on that body could prevent any settlement unfair to Turkey.

The facts seem to indicate that Turkey was tricked, and the "World Court" was used in the trickery.

Similar treatment was given Greece in 1923 when, after the murder of Italy's Albanian Boundary Commissioners in Greek territory, Italy bombarded Corfu and demanded fifty million lire indemnity.

Greece obeyed the order of the Conference of Ambassadors of the Powers and deposited the fifty million in the Swiss National Bank, "to be delivered in whole or in part to the Italian Government upon decision of the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague" (World Court). Greece and the rest of the world then awaited the decision of the court whether Italy was to get the money.

Then the Conference of Ambassadors took the matter out of the "World Court's" hands, awarded the fifty million to Italy, and told the "World Court" to request the Swiss National Bank to pay it to Italy. And the "World Court" did as it was told.

In these instances the "World Court" was not a tribunal of justice. It was merely an obedient, subordinate agent executing the wishes of the League of Nations.

How can anyone believe that the United States can adhere to the "World Court" and not be subject to its creator and master, the League of Nations?

The First Automobile

Built in Springfield, for a Philadelphian? or in Kokomo, by a Graduate of Worcester Polytechnic?

Springfield's recent and somewhat startling claim, that the first gasoline-propelled motor-vehicle ever successfully operated in America was put together in that city in 1892, is disputed emphatically and immediately, and not by Kokomo and the Indiana Historical Commission, but by the Heart of the Commonwealth.

Worcester speaks up on behalf of Worcester Polytechnic Institute, from which the late Elwood Haynes was graduated in the class of 1881.

Springfield's first horseless carriage was built for C. E. Duryea, of Philadelphia, and William J. Russell, who says he helped in its construction, asserts that it "chugged around the streets for many years."

The Chamber of Commerce was considering placing a commemorative tablet on the Russell machine shop in Taylor street when Worcester, sternly calling, "Halt!" directed attention to the record:

> That the claim to fame of the late Elwood Haynes, Worcester Polytechnic, '81, has been thoroughly investigated and accepted by the Smithsonian Institution.
> That the first Haynes car, 1893, has a place of honor in the National Museum at Washington, endorsed there as the "first successful American gasoline automobile."
> That the Haynes claim also has been investigated and accepted by the Indiana Historical Commission, which, with the Hoosier State Automobile Association, has erected a tablet on the spot in Kokomo where the first automobile "barked out the first challenge to highway transportation methods that had existed for five thousand years."

The controversy appears to be in its opening chapters. We hope to see it continued to a definite and satisfactory conclusion. Meanwhile, it occurs to ask if anyone knows why the BUILDING of automobiles got away from New England so completely?

City Slow in Removing Snow

Departments Should Function Smoothly Even Though a New Mayor Has Stepped In

Winter is "one up" already on the new administration in Boston, as golf terms go, and the first real fall of snow this season found the young administration wholly unprepared—or at least without energy.

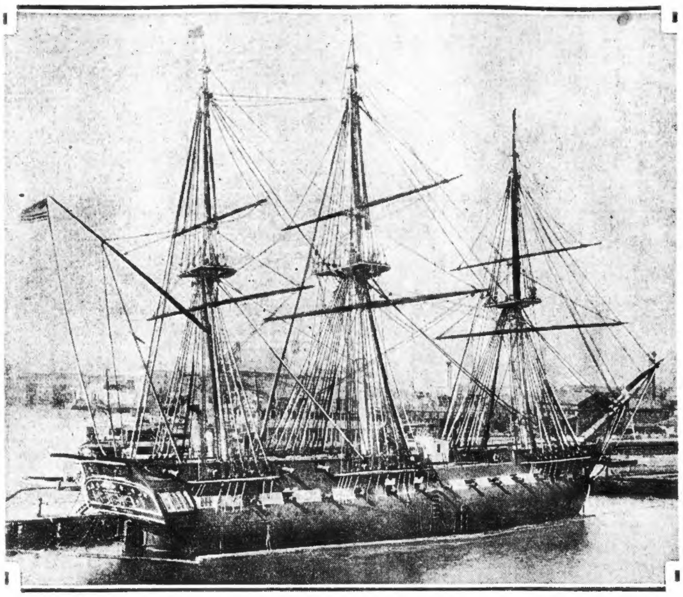
Not, however, that the condition differed from the previous administration, but some acceleration in snow removal had been hoped for.

For twelve hours it snowed in Boston. It snowed the same length of time in the cities and towns surrounding Boston. Yet, twenty-four hours after the last flake had fallen, horses and automobiles were floundering and sliding in drifts and ruts throughout the Hub, while in every adjoining community, almost without exception, travel was unhampered because plows had cleared every highway, even to the merest lane.

The administration is young as to its head in experience, but Winter gives no quarter even to shifting regimes. Departments in themselves should function adequately even while the city is "changing horses."

"Old Ironsides"

Native of Boston; Great American; Save Her!



THIS most famous warship in the world was BUILT IN BOSTON, near what is now Constitution Wharf.

Her gun carriages were made in the SOUTH END.

Her anchors came from Plymouth County.

Her sails were made in the OLD GRANARY BUILDING, at Park and Tremont streets.

A BOSTON man selected her timbers.

PAUL REVERE supplied the copper for her hull.

And oh! what she did for all America, when BOSTON had made her ready for the sea!

There is nothing finer in the story of our Navy than the record of this wonderful old frigate in our second war with Great Britain.

Three times she was victorious over British ships and three times she escaped capture by British squadrons!

She WENT OUT FROM BOSTON, to meet the Guerriere. EVERY young American knows the story of THAT victory.

The FIRST triumph of the CONSTITUTION "broke the illusion of invincibility that had begun to surround the British Navy;" the second "pulled the scales off the eyes of Europe."

Every month in the year, thousands of patriotic visitors to Boston go to the Navy Yard, in the shadow of Bunker Hill Monument, to see this historic ship which has so well earned a lasting place in the affections of Americans.

For the restoration and preservation of "Old Ironsides," the Navy is getting together, with the unselfish aid of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, a fund of $500,000.

Adults will contribute, of course, but a considerable part of this money will come from the BOYS AND GIRLS of America, collected in the schools. School children in thousands of cities and towns have been permitted to give their mites.

In some cities, the schools have been closed against the patriotic Elks and the heroic Constitution on the ground that "these collections" interrupt and interfere with the school routine.

Can you imagine a brief talk on the significance of the U. S. S. Constitution in American history interrupting or interfering with the routine of an AMERICAN school?

This old ship in Charlestown is one of us, as truly Bostonian as Breed's Hill, or Faneuil Hall, or the site of the Tea Party. Like many another veteran of the wars, she needs help. Knowing her story, understanding her relationship to their city, the boys and girls of Boston will be GLAD to help her. No LITTLE American should be permitted to prevent them.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

BUSINESS has been a little slow lately in the medical profession and several doctors have started to operate on credit.

A MAN can now have his appendix removed on deferred payments.

PEOPLE are able to get their tonsils taken out for a dollar down and a dollar a week.

YOU can pay for your adenoids the same as you would for an automobile.

EVEN poor people can now afford to have nervous breakdowns.

YOU don't have to be a millionaire any more to enjoy poor health.

IF you have your tonsils taken out on credit and don't pay your bill, the doctor is powerless to do anything. He can't very well put them back.

THE surgeon takes all the chances. Your tonsils are no good to him.

EVEN an adenoid has no cash value.

OF course, if you're being treated for asthma and don't pay your bill, the doctor can shut off your breath.

HE has the same rights as the gas company.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

I'M afraid.

This doesn't mean that I am a "nervous woman." I'm not afraid to stay alone at night, I do not faint at the sight of a snake nor hide in the closet during thunder storms. Nor do I easily lose my balance under excitement or strain.

Nevertheless Fear runs through all my life.

I cannot mark its course with a definite line, but its grim shadow tinges my brightest moments and noblest dreams. It is like a sluggish, black strain in the quick red of my blood. I can never be as happy or brave or honest or helpful as I want to be, because Fear weighs me down and trips me.

Outgrowing Fears

There are those who claim that they can conquer Fear by religious faith.

I do not deny this, nor would I shake the faith of such fortunate souls. But as for me, no creed or ritual cleans my life of this taint. I have found only one way to manage Fear. I am telling it today for the sake of those who, like myself, fight with one hand bound to their side by Fear. The way I've found is this—

Go on!

No matter how terrible your inward agony, go on!

Don't wait until the darkness lifts—

Don't step out of the ranks until your panic stills—

Keep going on!

Stick to your job!

Grab each small task that offers, whether it appeals or not!

Keep on doing something!

Go through the gestures of a normal life.

Keep Going

Do not betray by one least quiver of your face nor faltering of your grip that all your spirit crawls and whines in terror. Eat, talk and smile as though all things were well.

Then gradually your inner body will conform to your firm fighting front.

But some will say that we should call on God for help.

What makes you think, my friend, that we don't call on God for help when we invoke the fighting pride within ourselves?

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "PLAYING IN THE MOONLIGHT."

MOONLIGHT in a GARDEN
Is a STRANGE SETTING
That makes people ACT
STRANGELY.
It makes MOST MEN
Love to "STRUT
THEIR STUFF" and most
GIRLS WILLING
To ENCOURAGE them,
Even though they are BAD
ACTORS.
In the MOONLIGHT
ALL women are BEAUTIFUL
Heroines, and although
They may SOMETIMES forget
Their LINES, MEN DON'T.
They are ALWAYS ready to
PROMPT THEM,
Give them THEIR CUE,
And play UP TO THEM.
BAD MEN generally get more
BOLD, and good ones try to Be MORE GALLANT.
Of course, the GAY ONES
Are DECEIVERS, as always,
And THESE usually are
The MOST SUCCESSFUL;
For MOST women must be DECEIVED to be HAPPY, and in the
Moonlight this is, oh,
So very, VERY EASY.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

VERILY, my Daughter, the thoughts in the heart of a man are harder to read than the tablets of Tut-Ankh-Amen, and the mind of a woman cannot compass them!

Helen Rowland

For upon his lips the truth is stranger than fiction!

Lo, when a woman saith, "I love thee!" she meaneth, "I adore thee!"

But when a man saith, "I adore thee!" he meaneth, "I love thee—a little."

The heart of a woman crieth, "I can be utterly happy with this man, therefore I shall do my best to marry him!"

But the heart of a man crieth, "I shall be utterly miserable without this woman, therefore shall I marry her—even against mine own will."

A man saith, "Oh listen, listen! Thou knowest what I would say!"

But in his heart, he muttereth, "Oh Lord, what have I said now!"

Yea, verily, verily, all the days of their wooing, do they seek to bluff one another, as two "sharks" in a game of poker.

Yet, when the "engagement" is announced, they cry raptorously: "How perfectly we understand one another! Yea, we are so congenial!" And, who shall say that their sleeves are filled with laughter?

SELAH.

REAL WAGES HAVE INCREASED

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IN looking over the things to be thankful for during the last year the most important item is that real wages have increased.

In spite of the fact that prices and costs are greater than they were in former days, the working man of today enjoys a rise in his real wages; that is, wages measured in terms of what the worker can buy with his earnings.

In former days the comforts and luxuries of life cost more than they do today compared with what a man makes, so that now he has a surplus left over for the savings bank or the field of investment.

This was brought out by a survey of the National Industrial Conference Board, which says:

"The American workman today, if you measure the purchasing value of his earnings in terms of the same standard of living as prevailed in 1914, but discount the raise in retail prices, is twenty-four per cent. better off than he was in the beginning of the war, July, 1914, and five per cent. better off than he was at the peak of wage earnings during the inflation period of 1920."

This betterment, the survey says, is a result of increased industrial efficiency of the country as a whole. Fewer persons produce greater quantities than they did before, and increased application of power, better utilization of labor, mechanical ingenuity and managerial efficiency have steadily tended to reduce the cost of production.

The iron and steel industry is now about 140 per cent. above the pre-war level. In the automobile industry the wages are 122 per cent. higher than they were before the war.

Similar conditions are found to prevail in the chemical, foundry, and machine shop, rubber, furniture, leather and other industries.

We thus find that in actuality prices are not so high as we thought them to be, for the reward of our work is giving greater purchasing power than it did in the days when prices were low. Neither the prices themselves nor the amount of wages are the true basis. We collect our true pay when we compare the dollars we make with the things we desire.

Measured by this basis, our progress is shown to be real. We are better off than we ever have been, as a country.

MIGHTY HUNTERS OF 20,000 YEARS AGO

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

AT bottom human nature is always and everywhere the same. If that were not so this would be a sad world for travelers.

But, it being so, we can, in a broad way, count on meeting similar ideas, ways of living, needs, desires, likes, prejudices, impulse, and views of right and wrong, wherever we go. Other things being equal this remains true if we travel backward in time, even into the prehistoric age.

Lately there have been some strange discoveries in Moravia of the remains of a race of "mammoth hunters," supposed to have dwelt in that part of Central Europe at least 20,000 years ago.

These savages, who lived with cave bears, reindeer, mammoth, and other animals long extinct, were, in fundamentals, so astonishingly like people of our own time that we can read in the signs they have left stories of manhood, womanhood and childhood; of struggles for life and for livelihood, of love of the beautiful, of thoughts of future life, of home scenes in and about the caverns that were their dwellings, which stir us with a flood of sympathic human sentiment.

Reconstructed

From bones and skulls the appearance of these people in life has been reconstructed. The women were smaller, more delicate in anatomy, finer and handsomer in feature than the men.

The men were big-boned and big-headed. In fact this prehistoric race, no doubt the immediate precursor of the people who have made European history, had a cranial capacity exceeding that of the average European of the present day. However even if this means larger brains it does not mean higher intelligence.

As Sir Arthur Keith has pointed out, modern study of the human brain shows that it has at least as much to do with emotion as with intelligence. Anatomists have failed to find the "bumps" of the phrenologists inside the skull, but they have found there "motor centers" which govern physical movements and are connected with the expression of the emotions.

One might imagine an association between this and the large heads which always characterize great musicians—at least as far as hair will permit a judgment.

The motor centers in the ample heads of the mammoth hunters of the Moravian plain certainly had abundant exercise, both in actuating their intense bodily activity and in serving as buffers for the emotional shocks that must have attended their most exciting and perilous chase.

The modern relative of the mammoth, the elephant, is not easily killed, even with high-power rifles; think, then, of the risks that those early men ran in battling against such monsters with only spears and arrows tipped with flakes of flint or points of stone.

One of the touches of human nature which make the ages akin was found in an ancient grave wherein adults and children had been interred together. Around the neck of one of the children was a neatly made necklace of beads and pebbles, and near the skeleton of another child lay the skull of an Arctic fox. One may wonder whether the animal had been a playmate of the little savage.

In Glacial Period

All this occurred while the chill of the last glacial period was slowly withdrawing from Europe. It seems that a migration route of the mammoths and other semi-arctic animals ran across the Moravian plain, and cut into the bordering hills to the northward close by the place where the great collection of prehistoric bones and other remains has been unearthed. At this runway hunters lay in wait for the huge beasts, and killed them, for their flesh and for their ivory.

Yet these mighty hunters had the genius of budding art among them. Even with their rude implements of stone they learned to carve the ivory of the conquered tusks into shapes that the imagination suggested.

One miniature of the mammoth carved in ivory has been found, which may have been an admired masterpiece eighteen thousand years before Greek art was born.

It is probable that the blood of this people still flows in Europe. They belonged to what archaelogists now call the Aurignacian race, whose ancestors brought about the earliest known great revolution in human society when they drove into extinction—perhaps slaughtered as they slaughtered mammoths—their more savage predecessors, the Neanderthals.

CONSIDER THE LONELY ONE AND GIVE HIM CHEER

Suppose you don't know the person from your apartment house or your neighbor who is in a hospital, should this fact keep you from doing some kind act?

A call from you, some flowers or a book or magazine to relieve the monotony of those convalescent hours is not hard to give.

Supposing the person is not one of your "set," what difference does that make, so far as being kind to the afflicted is concerned?

Some workers from your establishment may be counting weary hours of lonely suffering away from home and friends.

This person may hold a minor position, while you hold a good one.

This should be additional reason for being kind and thoughtful in attentions to the sufferer.

The fact that you have remembered the invalid with some thoughtful little act brings greater joy than if the person were well and strong. It also helps toward recovery.

Why have you been such a selfish, self-centred person all your life? Another's misfortune is your opportunity to do a kind act.
